

This graph represents miscellaneous aphid counts from the six years that early season trapping was done and these aphids were counted. The miscellaneous category includes aphids that do not colonize potato fields. The graph shows that June 23 is the average time of the first population spike. Potato growers attempting to prevent spread of PVY by non-colonizing aphids should apply preventative treatments approximately one week prior to this population increase.

